Community applauds new streamlined permit process

By PAUL WOLF

WHAT DOESN'T stir controversy may be overlooked, regardless of how important it is.

The simplification of the city's permit process is a case-in-point. It may also be the first major issue on which most people in town can agree.

During the three years that residents and city officials poured over the complex downtown zoning study, their main concern was where the new lines would be drawn and what kinds of businesses would be acceptable within each district. In short, all minds moved toward the controversial elements.

What rarely received much attention was a key part of the zoning overhaul — which, in effect, would simplify the cumbersome permit process.

Quietly codified

The changes have been quietly codified, and the outcome will be a greatly speeded-up process for new businesses seeking to lodge themselves in Carmel-by-the-Sea's commercial sector.

For new businesses that don't present much potential controversy and that meet the basic health and zoning standards, all their approvals will be issued over the counter at the planning department.

Hopeful operators of restaurants, art galleries, gas stations, groceries, real estate offices and other uses will not have to state their cases before the seven-member Carmel Planning Commission. This is true so long as their proposals fits basic codes and standards, many of which were spelled out with new detail over the past three years.

A process that used to take anywhere from one to three months will now take one to two weeks, if not just a few days, according to Associate Planner Brian Roseth.

"I think people focused on the wrong results," said Mayor Ken White, noting the emphasis remained with the obvious areas of controversy, such as whether to expand the central-commercial zoning

Stonehenge replica is no graveyard

THE NEXT time you travel up Ocean Avenue, take a close look at Ralph Weston's highly unusual landscaping efforts.

Weston, a retired veterinarian with a practice in Carmel, began building a realistic replica of Stonehenge in his front yard about four months ago. He said he got the idea after visiting the site in England with his wife two years ago.

"This is a reasonably authentic Stonehenge," said Weston. "It's made of the same geologic stone as the original."

Weston said his yard has garnered a lot of attention lately. He has documented 136 visitors asking questions and snapping photos in the short time he's been working on it. He said English tourists are particularly intrigued by his efforts.

"When city planners came by and asked what I was building," Weston recalls, "I told them I was a retired veterinarian and I thought the town needed a pet cemetery."

He said the project will be completed by next week.

Library Foundation goal: to raise $75,000 this year

By PAUL WOLF

THE CARMEL Library Foundation is hoping Year Three will be the biggest yet.

The foundation is in the final stretch of this year's annual fund-raising drive, and the target amount is $75,000 — about as much as it raised in its first two years.

President Ed Jordan said the amount raised so far is somewhere between $30,000 and $40,000.

While a separate fund-raising organ from the library itself, the foundation has become indispensable to its survival and well-being — at least for the library's operating at the level it currently does.

As it stands, the foundation, starting this year, will provide all of the revenue with which the library can buy books and magazines, update reference books and maintain a number of programs.

While the city has paid for staffing and building maintenance, the money for books and other spending categories had come from the county's library system.

Last year, the county cut its funding to cities in half — allocating only $40,000 to Carmel. This year, it severed all grants to the city branches.

"It's a rather frightening thought for a library not to have a reliable source of money for books, said Library Director Margaret Pelikan."

Roughly two-thirds of Carmel's 12,000 library patrons live outside the city limits.

At the Monterey Public Library, the decision-makers solved their problem of severed county funding by charging non-

Board dismisses results of Carmel High drug survey

By SCOTT BREARTON

SCHOOL BOARD members dismissed the results of a drug survey recently published in the Carmel High School campus newspaper, declaring it was inaccurate and misleading.

But Dale DePalatis, Carmel High's newest journalism instructor who oversees publication of the Sandpiper, disagrees with the board's contention that the survey was ill-conceived.

CHS junior Collin Murray surveyed 72 students to gather information for an article published in the Sandpiper Oct. 15. From the survey, Murray concluded that "a whopping 70 percent" of those polled are either currently using drugs or have in the past.

Murray distributed 100 surveys to CHS students from all four grade levels, according to DePalatis.

A discussion about the survey arose at a Carmel Unified School District board meeting Nov. 12, when student representative Drew Teti commented on a front-page article published last week in The Weekly Sun .

The article stated that Jerry Pesce, a school psychologist responsible for drug- and alcohol-abuse programs, found "denial" and "tolerance" toward drug use to be "a prevalent attitude in the community." Statistics from the student survey were also used in the article.

Publicity not warranted

"This (Sun) article was spurred by a poll of students," Teti said. "All the publicity is not necessarily warranted." Since the survey was created by students, he added, "I think there is an extremely large margin of error."

CUSD President Hilton Bialek agreed with Teti.

"This happens every year," Bialek said, referring to negative front-page articles published in the local weeklies that the board must respond to.

"All I know is what I read in the (Sun) article. I understand that a student made up the survey. I know from my own professional experience that it is extremely difficult to develop an unbiased survey."

Smokeout

FOR THOSE who may not be aware, this is the day of The Great American Smokeout. We point this out for nonsmokers as well as smokers because in too many instances there is someone in our lives who smokes.

Smoking has become an American social issue. All you have to do is travel abroad — east or west — to witness that the anti-smoking movement is largely limited to our shores. Everywhere else, it seems, men especially are smoking lunitics.

All the more reason for us here at home to continue our fight against smoking. Perhaps as we get the message across to our fellow countrymen that smoking is bad for their health, that same message may begin to travel across the seas to foreign countries.

But first, the situation in the United States. Much success has been achieved. The banning of smoking on domestic short-run flights is a blessing. So, too, is the local no-smoking rules in restaurants and various public places. But there is still more to achieve.

As the Monterey Bay Area Dental Society has pointed out in a recent data release, there are an estimated 50 million cigarette smokers in the United States. Many of them are becoming sensitive to the affect their smoking has on nonsmokers, and that is appreciated.

But, we must help those smokers become sensitive to what they are doing to themselves. Help a friend stop smoking. It's in everyone's best interest.

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. Letters must not exceed 250 words in length. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address, telephone number and signature, and preferably be typed and double spaced. Anonymous letters, or those with no phone numbers will not be accepted.

Rides Taxi program

Dear Editor:

I read with interest the letter about the Rides Taxi program. As one of the group of "over 75" and an arthritic, I was often a rider in the Rides Taxis.

I am grateful for their kindness to me and to the City of Carmel for their share of the tickets.

The taxi rides gave us freedom and independence.

A ripping time in Carmel

Dear Editor:

Yes, it is called Public Works
My dear,
The poor bus driver has to steer
Past the yellow ribbons and cones
And if you try to cross on foot
You run the risk of broken bones.
It is all detour and retour.
I don't want to sound like a boor,
So I am writing this letter
About my visit to Carmel:
Streets will soon be fixed and better,
Having a ripping time, my dear,
Wish you were here.

Smoking at CHS

Dear Editor:

I've just read your editorial comments on page two of today's Pine Cone — concerning smoking at Carmel High School. I'm confused as to your implied criticism of our school. What are schools for, you ask? What indeed! It seems to me (and I've worked as a secretary to seven principals at Carmel High since 1966) that schools are, for one thing, to give firm and loving guidance to prevent young people who, because of their immaturity, make some unwise decisions that they pay dearly for down the road. Schools have the burden of "inflicting" discipline on young "free spirits" to help them mature toward a happy and successful adulthood. In our permissive society, that ain't easy. Often even parents, who should love these students the most, abdicate that responsibility.

Now, about smoking — a habit that leads too often to death and disease, especially when adopted by very young people. Smoking is illegal on school campuses. Carmel High has a closed campus. Our neighbors complain (and rightly so) when students go to the periphery of the school to smoke — they fear fire that will damage their homes. This fear is valid.

You speak of personal freedom. I would never want to go back to the days when students are flogged. But personal freedom needs to be tempered with good decision-making skills, with consideration for one's fellows, and for responsibility for one's behavior and choices. The staff at Carmel High School is dedicated to educating young people in academic subjects — and also to helping to form ideals and values that will enable them to achieve success in their life after high school. Our politicians deplore the "products turned out by schools today." Well, schools have to work with kids whose lives are impacted by our society. Whose side are you on, anyway?

New wrinkle brought to age of citizen support

By PAUL WOLF

IF CARMEL is entering an Age of Volunteerism, the Carpenter Street cause may bring a twist to the city's greater reliance on citizen support.

It does so for at least three reasons: first, it is not so much labor that the Carpenter Street Traffic and Safety Committee is providing for the list of public works and beautification projects. It is money.

Second, the committee did not turn to fund-raising at the city's urging, but it took up the task all by itself.

Third and most important, the committee is shouldering a large burden for an area than is usually well within the city's charge — namely, protecting the safety of its citizens.

"We know there is no money, and we didn't want to wait until who knows when," explained Paula Miller, a Carpenter Street resident the past year who recently joined the committee.

She added, "There are other people in line. I don't like the idea of robbing Peter to pay Paul. We are meeting our own needs."

Analysis

The most fundamental charge of local government is to safeguard the "health, safety and welfare" of its citizens. Much of the rest is luxury, or at least negotiable items. Considering the terrible accident history of the street and the purpose behind most of the committee's traffic-calming measures, the 10-member citizens group is hardly pursuing luxury items.

In another time, the thought that neighbors could have to furnish the money for its safety would have bred far more resentment. With budget problems in mind, Miller said, "I think the city is being responsible in not spending the money."

Jim Cullem, Carmel's public works director, the committee has launched a

Carpenter Street is a neighborhood first

By PAUL WOLF

ITS BEEN a slow yet disconcerting transformation of a street — from residential roadway to thoroughfare.

But residents of Carpenter Street in Carmel have taken matters into their own hands. "We want people to know this is a neighborhood first and a thoroughfare second," declared Shirley Crist, who chairs the 10-member Carpenter Street Traffic and Safety Committee.

Any observant driver traveling down Carpenter toward Ocean Avenue may already notice some changes.

At the intersection of Carpenter and Second Avenue, a single wooden sign has, just this week, replaced a complex of three metal signs. The stop sign is now made of wood. And a landscaped median on Carpenter has softened the road's thoroughfare atmosphere. And, over some stretches, a single yellow line rather than double line cuts through the drive.

The nearly two-year-old committee has demonstrated the indispensable role citizens, even on issues of health and safety. (See related story in this issue.)

As Public Works Director Jim Cullem explained, most of the improvements made so far would never have been carried out because the city would not have known they were wanted or needed. In addition, there has been the most basic problem of all: lack of funds.

So far, the committee's raised $1,600 from garage and bake sales and funds taken in with its new "Sign of the Times." Along with a $10 suggested donation, you get a kind of rotating plastic sign that is valuable in all kinds of emergencies: "Need Help," "Call Police," Call Tow Truck." You simply keep the so-called "Signal of Safety" with you in your car.

(Those interested in buying a sign to raise money for the committee should call Shirley Crist, at 625-3277.)

Calming traffic

Some of the changes seem geared more toward beautification than safety, but the two goals are actually go together: When drivers, the logic goes, approach a street that is recognizably residential, they tend to slow down.

"What looks like an extension of Highway 1 is not conducive to making people drive more slowly," said Cullem.

The wooden signs, the landscaped planters, the single yellow line and the traffic sign, complete with quaint logo of the village — these all work toward the

Acting planning chief says he'll take one step at a time

By PAUL WOLF

BRIAN ROSETH is taking it one step at a time.

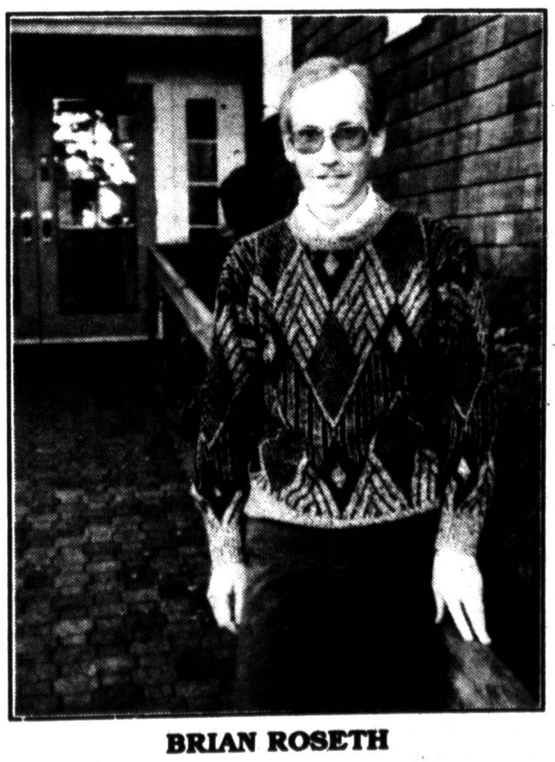
Roseth, Carmel's associate planner who next week will take over as acting planning chief, said he has not decided whether he will apply for the permanent position when the time comes.

Roseth said he needs to be asked first. If an offer is forthcoming, it will be made by a permanent city administrator — and there is no such person right now.

Starting next week, city hall will be in the usual position of having an acting administrator and acting planning director.

As for finding the right new people, the city administrator position is of a higher priority than naming someone for the planning director post. For one thing, the new city administrator apparently will make the selection for the latter position.

"I've been asked to serve on a temporary basis," said Roseth, 38. "Any decision I make will come after we have the new city manager." Asst. City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio became acting administrator after Doug Schmitz left for another job in the early part of this year.



BRIAN ROSETH

D'Ambrosio has said he will not apply to replace Schmitz permanently.

Carmel's sales tax in a slump; motel tax stable

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL CITY and business officials are hoping for a definitive sign the recession is ending. The most recent indicators prove they still have some waiting to do.

The motel tax and sales tax show more of the same — stable hostelry revenues but slumping sales income. In other words, people come here but hold onto their wallets.

"The trend has been that hostelry tax has been more stable (than sales tax)," said Sandi Davenport, the city's financial services coordinator.

The most recent quarter — July, August and September — yielded fairly good news for hostelry tax receipts: $911,191, or $67,177 over last year's receipts. That is about $27,720 over the income anticipated.

Sales tax was a different story. Receipts to date for fiscal year 1992 are $532,560, compared to $559,057 for the same period last year, showing a continued slowdown in overall spending.

Davenport doesn't believe Carmel, as a prime tourist destination, is necessarily more susceptible to recession than other cities. "People," she said, "are just curbing spending overall."

About sales taxes, she said, "It's an item of concern. If it continues to go down, we may have to make some budget adjustments."

Part of the reason for the decrease in sales tax income is the increased number of downtown vacancies, according to Davenport.

Toni Jepson, executive director of the Carmel Business Association, said her organization plans to conduct a survey of the commercial district to get a better handle on the percentage of vacancies. "I definitely think it's a higher proportion of vacancies than normal," Jepson said.

Savings tied to streamlined permit approval process district, or which uses to allow in each district.

The council finished answering these questions early this month when it lent final approval to all the points of the zoning revision.

Zoning-compliance statements

Those requesting a business will fill out a thorough zoning-compliance statement, which the staff will review. If everything is in order, a business license will be issued.

Business people will save the $350 cost associated with their planning commission application fees.

But there is a more significant savings that cannot easily be measured. By not having to wait for a hearing before the planning commission, applicants will not have to carry the burden of property-in-limbo, explained Roseth.

Planners will have less paperwork, fewer notices to post, fewer planning commission reports, less time in public hearings, and fewer annoyed applicants.

"I am happy about this; I think will help with uses that everyone agrees (do not pose a problem)," said Linda Anderson, who is a board member of the Carmel Residents Association.

Anderson said she is not concerned the public would be cheated by a process that takes care of so much business over the counter. She contends most of the items that will be streamlined are routine and non-controversial, even if time-consuming until now.

In a sense, the exhaustive process involved in the downtown zoning overhaul was the public review, explained Roseth. Nevertheless, the new way of doing business includes safeguards.

For example, the planning staff may schedule an item for the planning commission if there is any suspicion it would elicit controversy. Any commissioner can "pull" a business request for closer study and public hearing.

As for the hopeful business operators, if they believe the standards are not fair in the context of their particular case, they can appeal the matter and put it in the hands of the city council.

"I think this is a step in the right direction," said Barney Laiolo, a former mayor and a strong advocate of permit simplification during his spring campaign for mayor.

Not surprisingly, Laiolo believes their are still too many rules and regulations, and the cause of simplification could go further. Nevertheless, he is pleased with the progress.

While six weeks has been the norm for many kinds of requests, applications have been known to drag on for months. The recent case of the remodel at Cocogelato on Ocean Avenue stands out. The owners hung on for over a year from the time they applied to when the city council overturned a planning commission rejection of their project.

"It would have followed a different process now," said Roseth.

He said the owners would have had to change certain aspects of the project if they didn't fit certain standards and ordinances.

Had the owners still insisted on appealing, the matter would have much more quickly gone to the city council.

"This will not be a completely cut-and-dried process," Roseth said. "There will still be people who want certain things in their applications."

city patrons. The result for that city has been a loss of patrons.

"We had to make a choice," Pelikan said. "We chose to say, "Believe in us, believe in us and give."

Said Jordan, "We would like to make sure we do all we can to keep this a free library."

The three-month-long fund-raising campaign started in September and ends this month. Every household in Carmel's sphere of influence was mailed a brochure and a self-addressed envelope from the Carmel Public Library.

The library director said she has been delighted by everyone's generosity. She said gifts have "averaged over $100." She spoke of a kind of justice — in that most of the contributors live outside the city limits.

Meanwhile, the foundation continues to work toward the goal of building a $3 million endowment, whose interest would pay for books and programs. Jordan said about $250,000 has been raised so far.

CMS students benefit Hospice

TEN CARMEL Middle School students are building 75 redwood planter boxes on their own time because they want to help terminally ill children.

Sixth, seventh and eighth-graders at CMS are putting the finishing touches on the planters in the campus wood shop, with the help of industrial arts instructor Scott Rainer.

This is the second consecutive year CMS students have helped build the planters. Rainer said proceeds raised from the sale of the planters will be used to help build a pediatric wing for terminally ill children.

"The kids are aware of this and they want to help out," Rainer said.

All the redwood for the project was donated from area lumber companies – Hayward Lumber, Tynan Lumber Co., and Pacific Grove Builder's Supply, according to Rainer.

The planters will be assembled – complete with flowers – and sold at the "Friends of Hospice Christmas Bazaar," on Saturday, Nov. 21 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the San Carlos Cathedral Hall, 550 Church Street in Monterey. According to organizer Ned Prothro, all funds raised at the Christmas Bazaar directly benefit the Hospice Patients' Assistance Fund.

"It's a real compliment to the students at Carmel Middle School to be involved in such a worthwhile community project," Prothro said.

unique undertaking, reflecting the times. "You can make your requests, but there are a lot of them in the hopper. There is a lot of competition for limited resources. There are other neighborhoods that want improvements."

In the case of Carpenter Street, of course, public safety is not the only concern. Residents also hope to maintain or upgrade their property values, and slow traffic to insure their tranquility.

Repeatedly, Mayor Ken White has spoken of the "Era of Volunteerism," as he described it in a recent interview. To help city crews, residents have already taken a greater role in "adopting" public spaces, and participating in beach cleanups.

The restoration of the First Murphy House, arguably, is also a reflection of this newfound citizen support. Another example is the fund-raising effort for the fire department to acquire a new wildland fire engine. The rig has so far been rented without one dollar from the city.

Private action for the public good was perhaps what George Bush was talking about in his slogan, "A 1,000 points of light." However it may have been received, that rallying cry was all about the limitations of government.

"In a small town it is immensely easier to do than in a whole nation," observed Mayor Ken White.

And along a street or in a neighborhood, work for the common good may be yet the most natural. The committee working for the improvement of Carpenter Street may be an indication.

CHS survey dismissed

While Bialek made it clear he wasn't finger-pointing, he said, "It's easy to get the response you're looking for with loaded questions."

Teti said many of the students who completed the survey "thought it was a joke," and basically wrote in whatever they felt at the time to get a laugh from their peers.

"I do think that drug use is up at Carmel High," said CHS senior Paul Murphy. "It seems like it's more of a problem than when I was a sophomore."

Another senior who asked to remain unidentified agreed: "He may have gotten his results from a select group of people. A poll taken with a larger sample would've given more accurate results."

The source said that while beer and marijuana are popular at CHS, the figures given for psychedelics like mushrooms and LSD were inflated from what he would expect. The survey reported that, of 72 respondents, 21 had used mushrooms and 17 had tried LSD.

CHS instructor disagrees

"It was not a poorly written survey," said journalism instructor DePalatis. "I reviewed the survey (prior to its distribution) and found it was well-conceived.

There was nothing particularly unusual about the survey. The only alarming statistic was the high use of marijuana among students," DePalatis said. According to the survey, 47 of the 72 respondents reported they had tried marijuana.

"In the class I distributed surveys to," DePalatis added, "the kids seemed fairly serious."

"The students run their own newspaper," DePalatis insisted. "I only oversee the final product. We provide a service to the school. We realize we have a responsibility to be accurate."

Board member Patricia Herro captured the essence of the district's argument: "I thought Drew made a very accurate statement about the survey. I don't believe it was scientifically accurate. The survey reflects whatever they (students) wanted to say that day.

I truly believe that adolescents, just like adults, make choices about their behavior in using drugs and alcohol. I don't think that students at Carmel High use drugs anymore that any other school's students anywhere on the Peninsula. Some kids use and it affects their lives. Some kids don't use them at all."

Carpenter Street

same end. Said Crist: "We are trying to capture the villagelike flavor of the neighborhood."

Understanding the mission of the committee requires a brief look back.

Traffic on Carpenter has grown steadily worse over the years, as many motorists have used the street as a detour for Highway 1. They escape the highway at Carpenter, drive across town and rejoin the highway at Rio Road near the Crossroads.

In the five-year period from early 1985 to early 1990, there were 14 "investigated accidents" at the intersection of Carpenter and 3rd Avenue alone, according to Carmel Police Capt. Don Fuselier.

"I wouldn't say that is a shocking amount; but, yes, it is a significant number," he said, noting that particular intersection is the most hazardous on the entire street.

In March of 1991, the Carmel City Council formed the committee to study safety conditions and pass on recommendations to improve them. Several months later, the council endorsed a set of recommendations but explained it had no money to implement them. The committee would take it on itself to raise the money the city couldn't contribute.

The scope of concern, thus, broadened from a hazardous intersection to the safety and esthetics of Carpenter as a whole. All of the street was reviewed, from beyond the Carmel limits at Valley Way, all the way to Ocean Avenue.

This week's new signs at 2nd and Carpenter cost the committee roughly $640. That included the price of a logo design etched out by Richard Tette, a Carmel Valley artist and sign maker. Committee members plan soon to do similar sign replacements at the Valley Way intersection.

City's blessing

Also at that intersection, the committee, with the city's blessing, hopes to get the county's approval to reduce the 35 m.p.h. speed limit to 25 m.p.h., and move a bus stop bench on Carpenter further uphill from a blind of Valley Way.

The committee has also managed to get the city to trim roadside vegetation that blocks visibility, to establish a no-parking area on the west side of Carpenter Street north of 5th Avenue for a distance of 50 feet, and to gain stepped up speed patrol on Carpenter from police.

While the committee has funded some projects, the city has kicked in on a few tasks it originally believed it could not help with. For example, the committee originally anticipated it would have to pay $2,000 to contract out the construction of the center median on Carpenter just south of 2nd. But the city picked up the tab for the work.

Car burglaries

By PAUL WOLF

GUARDED OPTIMISM is now justified following the worst spate of car burglaries in Carmel's recent memory.

The reason for optimism is that Carmel-by-the-Sea has not been plagued by new incidents following the Nov. 4 arrest of three peninsula residents in connection with 14 vehicle burglaries within the city limits alone.

Daniel Czomba, 26, of Seaside, and Richard DeBlois and William Davis, both 18 and from Pacific Grove, are being linked with 20 cases in all.

The optimism is not without reservation. Within the span of about three weeks, the town was prey to 24 incidents total. There is no reason to expect the tide has been stemmed just because it has quieted down for now.

Lock your doors. Install alarms.

Det. Sgt. Pete Poitras said as many as three groups — which do not appear to have been working in association with one another — have been committing the crimes.

While two of the three suspects arrested are out on bale, and one is still in custody, Carmel police are on the trail of a second group. Of the three arrested Nov. 4, Poitras said, "We know they are not responsible for every car burglary that took place in Carmel."

To date, about $10,000 in stolen property has been reported, much of it now recovered. Items have included everything from car stereos to leather jackets and a pair of binoculars.

place ads in publications throughout the West Coast to announce the opening, according to Mayor Ken White.

Leading the head-hunting project is Ralph Andersen & Associates, a firm specializing in such efforts. It is likely to be months before a permanent new city administrator is found.

As for the planning department, Roseth will fill in for Diane White, 44, planning director since 1983. White is moving on to become director of the consolidated planning, engineering and building departments at Mercer Island, Wash.

Roseth takes over in tough times, as the department — currently including White and six employees — has lost roughly a third of its staff due to budget cuts and voluntary resignations. "I am honored by the selection and I will do my best for the city," said Roseth, who takes over Nov. 23.

Roseth explained it may be a dilemma for the new permanent city administrator whether to hire from within or seek "fresh blood." He said city hall and the planning department have been so stable since he started as a planning intern in 1982 that it is hard to say how things will unfold based on experience.

Sales tax down; will Christmas season make a difference?

Neither she nor Davenport had any precise information on the vacancy question.

Despite the numbers, Jepson expressed optimism. First off all, current sales tax figures are "never very current." Moreover, she believes the hostelry tax number are more telling.

Jepson said business has been on the upswing the past week or so, according to what she's learned from discussions with merchants and bank officials.

"Banks," she said, "are usually a good barometer."

Sometimes, she explained, a sudden improvement could simply be ascribed to good weather. Carmel's been blessed with some of that.

The improvement could not, however, be attributed to the impending Christmas season — still too far off to make a difference

She said she is also encouraged that, while many businesses have had to shut down, there tends to be people waiting in the wings to start new ventures.

Yet, she tempered her optimism: "I'm not suggesting we are out of the recession."

The Sun was 35 to 50 percent dimmer in its infancy—4.5 billion years ago—than it is today.

Resident volunteers clean beach

CARMEL RESIDENT volunteers, helping out the city in a time of staff shortages, made their first monthly cleanup of Carmel Beach Nov. 10.

Several dozen volunteers, including Howard Skidmore (shown here), systematically cleaned debris and charcoal from the north end of Carmel Beach using special screens and rakes. Volunteers enjoyed refreshments following the two-hour effort.

Organized by the Carmel Residents Association, the next beach cleanup is scheduled for Dec. 5, when work on the south end of the beach will begin. For details, call 625-0450.

Local horse wins U.S. Championships

"ELECTRIFIED," AN eight-year-old Half Arab gelding owned by Patience and Chris Carr of Carmel, won top honors at the U.S. Arabian National Championships held Oct. 16-24 in Louisville, Kentucky. Over 2,200 horses competed in the largest Arabian Nationals ever held.

Electrified competed against champion horses from Canada and the United States. He was named Reserve National Champion Hunter Pleasure, Reserve National Champion Ladies English Side-saddle horse, and top ten in Jumpers.

The horse was sired by the multi-champion purebred Arabian Stallion "High Voltage," owned by the Carrs and breeder Kathryn Prine.

Patience Carr trained and showed Electrified in many regional championships in qualifying him for the U.S. Nationals. She trains at Stonepine Equestrian Center in Carmel Valley.

Said Carr: "It was the toughest competition ever because of the quality of horses and the size of the show."

City urges clearing away for winter

AS WINTER approaches, we can soon expect our first good storm.

And with it, notes Jim Cullem, Carmel's director of public works, there will be piles of pine needles, leaves and twigs on private property and public spaces.

The City-of-Carmel urges residents to clean up theirs yards, clearing away debris and placing it in lawn bags. They keep the bags and leave them for the next scheduled pick up by the John Roscelli Corp. toward the end of December.

City officials are urging residents not to sweep pine needs, leaves and twigs into the street, since the street sweeper is unable to handle the task of picking up such items; branches jam the vacuum tubes.

Also, debris that is swept into the street can clog the storm drain culverts at intersections, causing serious flooding problems.

Carmel Police Assn. begins fund campaign

THE MEMBERS of the Carmel Police Officers Association are initiating their annual fundraising campaign. Contributions will support will provide financial aid for such programs as:

D.A.R.E: Drug Abuse Resistance Education, a program taught in our schools which teaches our children about the danger of drugs and how to resist their usage.

Seniors Helping Seniors: A program designed for seniors who live alone and/or are shut-ins who have little or no contact with family, friends or relatives. These seniors are contacted on a daily basis to insure them that someone cares. It also provides many senior citizens with an opportunity to get involved with their community and with their peer group.

Volunteers of this program make daily telephone calls to those who are housebound and/or live alone. In addition social events and home visitations are also planned to further enhance the quality of service.

Carmel Youth Center: Recreation center which provides activities for our youth. This program also provides a place for kids to interact and play together in our community.

Donations will not only support these programs but will support the publication of a Crime Prevention Manual to be distributed locally, as well as a benefit concert to be held at Sunset Center on Feb. 26, 1993.

Eighth-graders excel

EIGHTH-GRADERS at Carmel Middle School performed exceptionally well on state tests taken during the 1991-92 school year.

CMS students scored in the 95 percent range or higher in reading, math, history, and science, according to principal Karl Pallastrini. Students improved in all areas except history, which showed a one percentage point decrease from similar tests taken during the 1989-90 school year. The test was not authorized by the state during the 1990-91 school year, explaining the lack of data for that year.

"We're very proud of the fact that the kids scored as well as they did," Pallastrini said.

"But the difficulty is, where do we go from here?" Pallastrini asked, noting that the State tends to recognize improvement more than they do continued high-end performance.

"Carmel Middle School is not likely to receive the recognition it deserves due to the fact that our students continue to perform at such a high level," Pallastrini observed.

Eighth-graders throughout the state took the California Assessment Survey of Basic Skills or CAP testing last year.

Day-laborers

Proposed job center for CV

By SUSAN BECK

BLANCA ZARAZUA proposed a solution to the day-laborers dilemma in Carmel Valley Village at a Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee (CVVIC) meeting Nov. 13.

The dilemma centers around the numerous laborers who gather at Delfino Place in the village looking for work. Several complaints from local residents have occurred during the last year, and those complaints exploded in the form of a recent raid by the U.S. Border Patrol.

The raid culminated into an auto chase and ended with a patrol agent firing a shot at the speeding car. Ten men were arrested.

Zarazua, a tax attorney and former Carmel Valley resident, suggested a job referral center that would provide facilities and services for day-laborers.

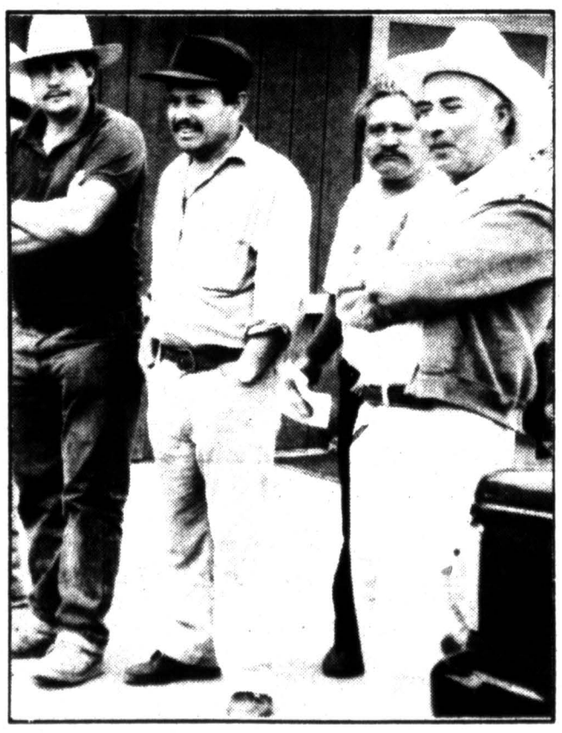
"My perception of the problems," said Zarazua, "are health risks, the protection and damage to nearby commercial buildings, intimidation, loitering, traffic, and safety risks with the border patrol."

She said the center would legitimize the laborer's position by requiring Social Security benefits and workers compensation. It would also provide a safe, clean and congenial place for employers to select laborers. And, she said it would enhance their quality of life.

"I encourage people to look at it as a long-term solution," said Zarazua. "It would decrease the potential to heighten community conflict in the future."

Panetta's response

Rep. Leon Panetta's recent response to the day-laborer situation is one of deep concern. After the Carmel Valley Village raid Oct. 28 he said, "Innocent people get caught up with those who are not documented. We have to be careful about this in a democratic society."



DAY-LABORERS

Prior to the raids, Panetta arranged a meeting of community members from Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties to discuss similar problems related to large numbers of day-laborers seeking work in each of these areas.

WILL REP. Panetta's next walk in Washington, D.C. be to the White House Cabinet chambers?

Cabinet hopeful Panetta: fits in with Clinton team

By SUSAN BECK

THE TALK about town that Leon Panetta is being considered for a Cabinet position on Capitol Hill is not simply unfounded rumor.

A list of names that includes Panetta for Bill Clinton to consider for his new administration was printed in The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, and The Washington Post.

"They have me on a list," said Panetta, "but I have not been directly contacted."

It shouldn't surprise anyone that the California congressman who has been elected nine times with a majority vote is being thought of by the new leadership in Washington.

Meeting Gore

In 1976 he was elected to the U. S. House of Representatives from California's 16th Congressional District. That's when he met Al Gore.

"We were classmates," said Panetta, referring to their both being elected to Congress in the same year. "Actually, I knew him even before then. His father, Al Gore, Sr., was a U. S. Senator, and I knew the family. Al and I became friends. He's a good basketball player and I like to play. A group of us who all thought alike played together."

Panetta's environmental goals are in keeping with Gore's. He has authored numerous successful measures to protect the California coastal areas from offshore oil and gas drilling. Of course, the most prestigious of his efforts led to the creation of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary.

"I wish I could pass a similar law that provides a sanctuary in the air over the Monterey Bay," said Panetta. He added that the most important goal is to protect the quality of life that is here on the Monterey Peninsula.

If Panetta is offered a position in the Clinton administration, it would be a difficult decision to make.

"I love this area," he said. "People think your sanity is in question even if you leave here for a few days. I would have to give up being here, and, also, I would have to give up the independence of being a representative. In the executive branch, you have to walk the line."

Clinton says he wants to reduce the deficit, and Panetta shares this goal. But he takes an even harder line.

"Frankly, I always felt that his (Clinton's) budget deficit program needed to be expanded. You can't set the deficit aside when dealing with problems in society. My recommendation is to, first, set a clear deficit-reduction plan and, secondly, focus on areas you want to invest in such as education, the infra-structure and health care. The two have to go together."

He is in favor of trading higher education for public service, creating jobs for people on welfare — for example, cleaning up the highways — providing a health care system that is assessable to everyone. Panetta also supports some types of investment tax credits.

In all, he said, "I don't disagree that much with Clinton."

He added that all of this has to be done within the discipline of lowering the deficit. "Otherwise, there is the danger that the financial markets will be very concerned about the administration's commitment to reducing the deficit. Consequently, interest rates will go up."

Panetta said that he would like to be part of the president-elect's proposed economic summit.

"It's important because the administration needs to have a perspective from Capitol Hill on what we view as the consensus," he said. "Whatever package Clinton presents has got to get past Congress. The summit should include members of both the House and the Senate."

After years of what seems to be an untainted career, Panetta is not the least bit worried about the possible scrutiny and interrogation that usually follows an appointment to the Cabinet.

"I really have always believed that public service is a public trust," said Panetta.

He said there are certainly tempta-

Seeds of public service planted early for Panetta

By SUSAN BECK

HIS FIRST piano recital was held at Sunset Center in Carmel. He was 12 years old, and he was considered a protege.

Naturally, his parents and teachers expected that he would become a great classical pianist. But, the young Leon Panetta just never developed the commitment to do so.

He was more inclined toward politics, or, rather, public service.

Panetta has always lived in the Carmel Valley house his parents built two years after they bought the property in 1946. He lives there now with his wife, Sylvia, and their three sons, Christopher, Carmelo and James.

His father planted an orchard on the property that is still there today, and Panetta continues to enjoy the rural nature of the valley, the sun, and working outside.

"It's a great retreat," he said. "It's quiet, and there are a lot of memories here."

In 1952 he attended Monterey High School because years ago Carmel Valley was part of the Monterey Unified School District. During those years he got involved in school activities and was elected vice president and then president of his class.

Panetta went on to the University of Santa Clara majoring in political science. He then attended the University of Santa Clara Law School. After graduating in 1963, he joined the Army, serving two years as a lst Lieutenant.

It was at this point that Panetta faced a major life decision.

"Do I settle down into a small town law practice, or try something in government?" he asked himself. "I went for government. I figured it was worth a shot."

He wrote to Joe Califano, assistant to President Lyndon Johnson.

"I didn't know him. But, since his name was Califano, I thought a letter from Panetta...well, anyway, he set up some appointments for me in Washington, D.C."

In Washington

When he arrived in Washington, he visited Capitol Hill. He had always liked Senator Thomas Kuchel from California, and decided to stop in to see him. They discussed Panetta's working in Washington.

"He took an interest in me. There happened to be a legislative position open, and I got the job," said Panetta.

From there he went on to become a special assistant to the Secretary of the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, director of the U. S. Office for Civil Rights and executive assistant to the mayor of New York City. He also practiced law for five years, founded the Monterey College of Law, and has been elected to the U. S. House of Representatives nine times.

Currently, he is the chairman of the House Budget Committee, and a member of several committees such as the House Select Committee on Hunger, House Agriculture Committee. In addition, he was a vice chairman for the Caucus of Vietnam-Era Veterans in Congress.

He authored numerous measures: to reduce domestic hunger, including the Hunger Prevention Act of 1988; to protect employment practices by authoring the Fair Employment Practices Resolution, extending civil rights protections to House employees for the first time in history, and the list goes on.

Most recently, he worked on protecting the environmentally sensitive California coastal areas from offshore oil and gas drilling. And, he authored the successful measure to create the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary.

Panetta's political record seems to indicate that if he had continued to practice law he would have become an advocate for the underdog or groups who are less able to fend for themselves.

"I guess it probably goes back to law school. I remember we started a public advocate group to assist other people," said Panetta. "And, in the military, I represented a lot of individuals who were minorities, victims of discrimination. In the military, at the time, you were presumed guilty until proven innocent. I found it challenging."

Panetta's parents were also instrumental in his inclination towards helping others. "They were immigrants from Italy who did not have a lot of education or money. They worked hard, and I sympathize with people facing the same challenges."

Consuming responsibility

The life of a politician is a consuming responsibility, but Panetta does plan to retire at some point. When he does, it will be nowhere else than his home in Carmel Valley.

"My wife — who works every bit as hard as I do and knows the district and the issues as well as me — and I would like to spend some time just sitting back and enjoying the area," said Panetta.

Over the years, he has seen the valley grow from an essentially agricultural and cattle area to more of a suburb. He said that his most important political and private goal is to do everything possible to maintain the quality of life that is here.

"I love Carmel Valley the way it is," said Panetta. "And, I hope we always keep the rural nature of the valley."

Panetta's retirement is a long way off, but in the meantime, he has just the remedy for the day-to-day pressures that are sometimes overwhelming.

"My piano teacher, David Alberto, was a wonderful guy. He always instilled in me the love of music," said Panetta. "There is nothing like playing a little Mozart, Chopan, or Beethoven to take your mind off your problems."

Job center proposed for Carmel Valley day- laborers job centers for the laborers, and plans to make it his immediate goal. William Melendez, past state director of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) is working with Panetta towards the same end.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors have been contacted by Panetta, but there has been no action taken to date.

In October, Zarazua submitted a proposal for a non-profit job referral center program to the Overall Economic Development Corp.

The attempt to obtain county funding was rejected on the bases that the proposal did not identify a non-profit operating organization or a source for matching funds. The proposal, said Zarazua, will be submitted again.

The job center is modeled after similar programs in San Rafael and La Brea and is expected to have an operating cost of about $180,000 for the first six months.

Zarazua suggested that perhaps if the program were established in Carmel Valley it could be viewed as a pilot project for the county.

She said that the job center could help the people who are here legally to become good solid citizens.

Despite complaints

Despite local complaints, there were some concerns that a job center may not be the answer.

Many contractors from the valley area and surrounding areas such as Prundale and Salinas like the accessibility of hiring laborers on the spot in the village.

Roger Williams, a CVVIC member, said that one of the pitfalls to the project might be that employers now do not have to pay any benefits. He said, "The program may have a discouraging result at the outset."

Stewart Clough, president of the Carmel Valley History Society, said, "So often, your jobs come through at the spur of the moment. There is no way I can go to the Employment Development Department within two hours and find someone to work for me. It takes three days."

He said that the job center would not be a replacement for the employment department, which is bogged down in paper shuffling.

"The job center would get all of the day-laborers off the street, which is the biggest problem. The situation would be self-regulating according to supply and demand."

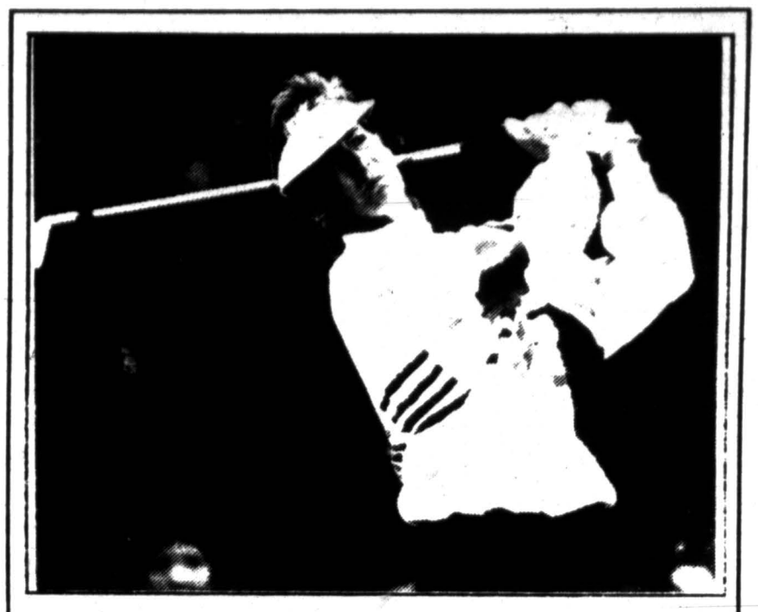
tions in politics, but he believes in doing the best job you can at the time. "The decisions are tough enough."

He added that he is always prepared to make the unpopular decision. A decision, perhaps, that may lose him an election.

"I have the security of knowing I have my home and (legal) profession," said Panetta. "That's the key. It's when you become too dependent on the job you're in that you begin to cut corners morally and otherwise. Don't become too dependent on any job."

If he is offered a position in Washington, and takes it, who will fill the void?

"There are a lot of good people out there who are interest in my position, but I don't want to speculate," he said, adding about his Washington prospects, "maybe none of this will happen."



Understanding Golf

By JANET COLES

SIDE LIES: It is important for simplicity and consistency to minimize any departures from your basic swing.

I suggest to add swing changes only when the disparity in ground levels are severe. Therefore, handle slight side-hill lies through set-up adjustments only.

There are four parts to this approach.

Part 1 — BALL ABOVE FEET

1. Choke down on grip to promote better swing control.
2. Take sufficient club to offset loss in distance resulting from shortening club shaft length.
3. Stand slightly further from ball.
4. Aim slightly right: Ball will have tendency to curve left.
5. Promote balance by keeping weight toward toes.
6. Also to insure balance and control: Swing within yourself.

Top Tularcitos teachers honored by former students

TWO TEACHERS from Tularcitos Elementary School were honored recently by their toughest critics –their former students– in the second edition of Who's Who Among America's Teachers.

Fifth-grade teachers Jen Simmons and Phillip Smith were nominated by their former students for making a difference in their lives, shaping their values, inspiring interest in a particular subject, or challenging them to strive for excellence.

Simmons has been teaching fifth-grade at Tularcitos for eight years.

"I know who the student is," said Simmons, "but I'm not sure why she picked me. But I feel really honored."

Smith has been teaching fifth-graders at Tularcitos off and on since 1972.

"I think the fact that the honor comes from a former student is most significant," Smith said, adding that this is the second time he has been nominated for the award.

All of the 65,000 teachers being honored nationwide were selected by their former students, who themselves are currently listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students, or The National Dean's List publications, which recognize the top five percent American high school and college students.

Padre Sports Review

By James Genone

Padres lose to PG in a heartbreaker

DESPITE SHAVED heads, and fans screaming "we want the shoe!" at the top of their lungs, the Padres couldn't keep the Pacific Grove offense in check last weekend, and the Breakers went on to win 40-28. PG had 362 rushing yards on their way to the victory.

Things looked bad for the Padres early, as PG jumped out to a 21-0 lead, but Jeff Saunders' three-yard run put the Padres on the scoreboard just before half-time. After receiving the second half kickoff, the Padres proceeded to march down the field in four plays and score on a 26-yard pass from John Geisler to Sean Boehlje. The Breakers fumbled the ensuing kickoff and, after a Carmel recovery, John Tedrow took the ball on a draw play and scampered 23 yards to tie the score at 21-21. After that, PG ran away with the game. Literally. Two Breaker running backs rushed for over 100 yards, as the Padre defense collapsed, allowing three second-half scores. With little over a minute to go, Carmel did mount a comeback. Geisler hooked up with Boehlje again on a 25-yard scoring toss, but it was too little, too late, as PG recovered an onside-kick, and let the clock run out to secure the win.

This was a game of highs and lows, and a tough one for the Padres to lose. In many ways it epitomized the whole season. The team has been up and down all year and, unfortunately, ended on a down. A team never wants to lose a game, especially not the last game of the season. Many players on the team had shaved their heads as a show of spirit in the days before the game, but the Padres just couldn't put it all together. All season long it seemed that whenever the offense was on track the defense wasn't, or vise-versa. Overall, the Padres performed well, considering the adversity they faced this year. They ended the season with a 4-6 record that could have just as easily been 6-4 if not for losses in tight games against Gonzales and PG which the Padres could have won. Hopefully, next year Carmel will meet with more success. Padre quarterback John Geisler, already recognized as one of the best talents in the area though only a sophomore, will have a year of varsity football experience under his belt, as will sophomore lettermen Ben Thompson, Dustin Nagai, Justin Garza and Darren DeMayo. In addition, the team will be familiar with the offense, which was new this year.

MARC GARZA (51) and Timber Trotter (61) trot off the field after a successful defensive series against Pacific Grove last weekend. (James Genone photo)

Although the season ended with a loss, there will be many good memories for the graduating players. Captains Marc Colliard, Lance Thompson, Marc Garza, and Kyle Koontz were major leadership figures on the team. With the help of other senior standouts, including Sean Boehlje, who should make all-league, John Tedrow, Jeff Saunders, Anthony Herro, Cho Prassert, and Timber Trotter, the Padres played hard in every game, and earned the respect of their opponents, even when they didn't win.

Frosh-Soph Football

A season filled with adversity ended for the Padre JVs last weekend with a 27-8 loss against PG. The team has played all year with a small squad made up mostly of freshmen, but they gave it their best effort in every game. A number of talented sophomores will make a serious impact as varsity players next year, especially running backs Matt Cramer and Brent Carlson, and receiver Juan Cortina. In addition, head coach John Ables can expect that his crew of now seasoned freshmen, led by quarterback Ryan Sanchez, will have an easier time competing with some of the league's better teams.

Cross-Country

Carmel's Danielle Wall just won't quit. After destroying a course record and coming in first at the MTAL finals two weeks ago, she won the Division IV race last week, finishing the track 0:38 ahead of her nearest competition. As the top finisher, Wall will proceed to state championships on Nov. 28. In addition to running, Wall also maintains a 4.0 GPA and participates in several other extra-curricular activities.

Waterpolo

The Carmel Padre Waterpolo team finished second in the MBL after beating Salinas 13-9 during the championships at Hollister High last week. Robert Allaire, who has led the Padres all season, had eight goals in the tournament, and Nate Stiles had 26 saves. The Padres will compete in CCS finals at DeAnza college this weekend.

Generation warp

I WENT overseas for three weeks and came home to find my generation is now in charge of my country. Besides having to reset my circadian rhythm to western time (it's 2:00 a.m. in Hongkong right now) I also have to catch up with the gang. Bill, Hil and the boys could have been my classmates and soon they'll be running the show. The fatherly statesmen I could never relate to except as out-of-touch parental figures have been replaced by my contemporaries. It's a heady, exciting feeling. Kids taking over the class. Something like "Home Alone Goes to the White House."

In an effort to catch up, regain my perspective and hopefully enlighten yours, let me fill you in on a few local current events.

Ted and Jane

Did Planned Parenthood know something months in advance when they booked Ted Turner and Jane Fonda Turner for a fund raising reception a mere week after the election? According to Holly White, Planned Parenthood director of communications, it couldn't have come at a better time. The sell-out crowd (they turned away at least 70 people) celebrated the positive changes everyone hopes are coming.

"It wasn't just another fund-raising party," White bubbled, "You know how boring those can be. Everyone was happy, excited, looking forward to a better future. We're non-partisan but you could feel it. Our reception for the Turners gave people an opportunity to express their joy. It wasn't like before when things were pulled down by negativity."

The Planned Parenthood staff was especially uplifted. They've been operating under the specter of a loss of funding for months. And the Bush administration gag-rule on abortion information was their most recent threat. They eagerly anticipate Bill Clinton making good on his promise to lift the gag rule.

Speaking of promises, Ted Turner and Jane Fonda appeared on the peninsula in support of Planned Parenthood as a result of a promise made to a friend. Turner and Dr. Ted Stotler, one of the founders of Planned Parenthood were pals for many years. Not too long ago, Jane and Ted were at their Big Sur home and Jane fell, cutting her head. Turner called Dr. Stotler and asked him if he should bring Jane to town for treatment. Stotler said no, he would make a house call. Thankful, Turner offered to pay his friend, but Stotler refused, saying he would prefer to take his payment in the form of a fund raiser.

Dr. Ted Stotler died suddenly April 26 of a massive heart attack. His friend Ted Turner made good his promise and the Planned Parenthood "Evening with Ted and Jane Turner" was dedicated to Stotler.

Change can be good

The theme of the 1993 Gourmet Gala is "Faerie Tales Can Come True..." and despite last year's harang ing and gnashing of teeth at my suggestions for change, some new people have been invited and have accepted. It seems fresh faces can come true.

Chris Burke who plays Corky, Bill Smitrovich, who plays his father Drew Thatcher and Corky's stage sister Paige, played by Tracy Needham all from the television show "Life Goes On," are confirmed, in addition to baseball star Ernie Banks. The "Life Goes On" cast appearance will be made possible by the involvement of Pebble Beach resident Phillips Wylie, producer of "Life Goes On."

Shirley Winter Wylie, Phillips' wife, is one of the designers who have taken on the challenge of this year's theme. Designer Chairwoman Linda Williams says she has had designers beating down her door to tackle the "Faerie Tales" that include "The Snow Queen," "Little Red Riding Hood" and in the case of Wylie, "Rumplestilskin." All the themes have been assigned, but Williams has a back-up list of eager second-stringers.

Pigeons

The Natividad Medical Foundation annual fund raiser is scheduled for Saturday Nov. 21, at Quail Lodge. The deep pockets parties of past years have been replaced with a more modest venue that includes a performance by pigeons. This is the first phase of two-stage event that will culminate next year. For more information and reservations for this year's event call Chairman Morley Brown at 624-3166.

Have I missed something, or was last year's Natividad party the swan song for a local well-known special event specialist?

Date bait

The annual March of Dimes "Bid for Bachelors" was held during my hiatus. hut no matter. Married ladies were not eligible to bid this year. Many single women living on the Monterey Peninsula have two jobs, over-extended credit cards and are too tired to care about dating, let alone shell out big bucks for a big stud. Did this new rule affect the bottom line?

Traditional holidays

"Home for the Holidays," La Mirada's annual celebration of home and hearth again charmed visitors with floral demonstrations, decorator rooms, tips for entertaining, home tours, fashions and a brunch. An integral part of this year's theme of "Sentimental Journey" was an exhibition of 15 original sticheries by the late Martha Mood, who played a key role in the transformation of stitchery into an art form.

Culture awards

Monterey County Cultural Council has announced that a two-month search for the county's most outstanding and supportive patrons of the arts, 44 local businesses, foundations and individuals have been nominated by Monterey County arts organizations for the MCCC distinguished benefactors of the arts awards. From this field of nominees, the Cultural Council will select those who will receive the Most Distinguished Benefactor of the Arts Award on Friday, Nov. 20 at The Inn at Spanish Bay. Julie Meier Wright, director of the California Department of Commerce will be the guest speaker. For more ticket information call 408/ 424-3043.

WOMEN'S YEAR

Carmel Valley resident Noel Irwin-Hentschel, the founder of The Noel Foundation and owner and CEO of Americantours International recently presented a grant of $100,000 to the director of the United Nations Development Fund for Women. The venue was the Annual Business Council of the United Nations Ambassador's Dinner at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York. The donation will support entrepreneurial, grassroots projects for women in India and Jordan.

Steve Allen presented the annual award in general semantics to Carmel resident Mary Stone Morain at a lecture/dinner held Nov. 13 at the Harvard Club in New York. Morain is a long-time student of general semantics, editor of many books in the field and past President of the International Society for General Semantics.

Horror, clarity

Irresistible Impulse. By Robert Lindsey. Simon & Schuster. 303 pages. $22.

CARMEL'S ROBERT Lindsey shows once more that bestselling authors don't get there by accident. He writes true crime stories in a manner which reflects tough intelligence at every level — style, subject, an eye on filmic possibilities (The Falcon and the Snowman is his).

Lindsey's work has attracted both the Edgar Allen Poe and Gold Dagger awards. The book at hand departs not a whit from his prize-winning thoroughness.

As stylist, the man votes 1,000 percent for the scrubbed, spare, declarative approach wherein thrust and quality of research outweigh dazzle. The nightmare accrues bit by realistic bit, and flatness of speech drives the horror deeper: "The reporter said the police had identified his daughter, Monika Zumsteg-Telling, as the headless corpse found the week before at a beauty spot in Devon."

Lindsey says he was drawn by the Romance Novel setup which became a Gothic shocker: California golden gal marries a tremendously wealthy Britisher whose later tantrums and threats terrify her. She discovers his secret. Michael spent much of his life in a psychiatric ward for having set fire to his boarding school.

Self-assigned duty

Monika stays, convinced she can help him and has that duty. She answers stress with booze and love affairs. (If the story hasn't already been optioned by some film producer, I'd bet a month's pay that such occurs before this year ends.)

Michael confesses: I slew her. (He had, after all, catalyzed a nationwide search and kept her head in their manor house's garage.) But he dodges the murder charge after an expensive defense team claims he'd been taken by uncontrollable urges. The fragile Michael, it's claimed, was maddened by this bad woman's bad ways.

The British tabloids, of course, have a field day. The late Monika is called "one of the most wicked ladies in the history of English jurisprudence" — a drug addict and shrewish fortune hunter.

Lindsey's craftsmanship obviates any notion that the courtroom action and larger truths are cut and dried. His jump-cuts between California and the British upper crust help create suspense all along.

The book proffers evidence not used at the trial. I'll not let air out of the writer's tires by telling what Lindsey presents. He does so with the same tensile strength that made him a high-quality journalist.

Hard looks

The book takes hard looks at the complex psychological relationship between Monika and Michael. In so doing, it renders definite service.

Today, the terms "dysfunctional" and "co-dependent" have been blunted by downright silly overuse.

We're reminded by Robert Lindsey that specific kinds of mental and emotional pairings do indeed end with horrific acts.

Usually some warning exists. There's no loss of honor if, under conditions which make tragedy inevitable, one runs for the hills.

Helping a neglected pet

WE OFTEN receive calls on our pet foundation line from concerned people who want to help a pet they feel is being abused or neglected. Obviously, there are legal issues involved and certain steps that must be taken. A helpful pamphlet from the American Humane Association describes neglect and advises what you can do to help solve the problem. For a free copy, send a pre-addressed stamped envelope to AHA, 63 Inverness Drive, E., Englewood, CO 80112, with a note requesting "Can You Help a Neglected Pet?"

No more options?

If your local veterinarian is unable to help your pet with a problem, don't give up — consider a referral to a state college veterinary hospital. Those veterinarians concentrate on research, developing new cures for problems and treatments unavailable or unknown to most local veterinarians, who generally handle the more common day-to-day needs of pets. The University of California at Davis has an exceptional veterinary school and hospital and I highly recommend that you contact them if your pet has a special need.

Making beautiful choices

The Humane Society of the United States is embarking on a new campaign, called Beautiful Choices, to encourage consumers to use non-animal-tested cosmetics and personal-care products.

To participate, manufacturers sign an agreement pledging to support efforts to end animal testing for cosmetics and personal-care products, and stating that their specific products (including ingredients) have not been tested on animals. This agreement allows the company to use the Beautiful Choice symbol in their advertising and on their goods.

I hope you'll look for the symbol when you buy cosmetics or personal-care items. It depicts a rabbit encircled by the words "Pledged to the Humane Society of the United States — Not Animal Tested."

American consumers have already proved that they wield tremendous power by successfully boycotting canned tuna until several well-known manufacturers took steps to avoid drowning of dolphins and other marine animals by changing their tuna-fishing policies. In fact, you can find "dolphin-safe" symbols on tuna labels in every supermarket.

We can make a significant statement by what we buy or do not buy. Watch for the Beautiful Choice symbol in displays of products not tested on animals. You may be surprised at the number of non-animal-tested products available, including shampoos, cosmetics, hair-care and body-care items. We can make a difference!

See you next week!

Guide to better health in the '90s

THE PLUTO in Cancer generation (those born between 1914 and 1939) dealt with the land, the environment, and the production of food. The sign of Cancer is "fertility," and yet there was a revolution in agricultural techniques when we brought in chemical fertilizers, insecticides along with dams for waterways to irrigate and produce electric power. Health-wise, many from this generation were born with thyroid imbalances, ruled by Mercury and Taurus. A simple blood test can determine levels of hormones in the thyroid. Also, weight gain upsets and contributes to an imbalanced thyroid.

The result of Pluto in Cancer is now apparent in the Pluto in Scorpio transits and those born between 1984 and 1995 which says "transform your lifestyles, habits or die," because Scorpio doesn't mess around... it is the sign of death and transformation, its greatest health dangers being tumors, especially those found in the colon, weak thyroid and back problems. The transits of Pluto in Scorpio (until 1995) has been leading us to a transformation of our health patterns and diet; where our food comes from and what's in it before we open our mouths, is all important.

Forced purification

Since 1984 there has been a forced purification and purging taking place in our bodies. Any Leo can tell you that he/she is experiencing changes in their entire body, especially the circulatory system (Leo's ruler the Sun rules the heart); also any Taurus, Scorpio, or Aquarian may be at risk for poor circulation. I suggest more exercise, like walking and taking herbs like red clover and cayenne.

Anyone with their Moon in a fixed sign (Taurus, Leo, Scorpio or Aquarius) will definitely require a change in diet since it is likely that you will experience "digestive disturbances," and how about your allergies being aggravated? I recommend homeopathic therapy.

Those with their Mercury in fixed signs will experience nervous exhaustion, and possibly mental breakdowns, brought on by acute strain. Mercury in Taurus (George Bush), Leo, Scorpio and Aquarius would benefit frcm a health spa on a regular basis, especially one that devotes its program to complete relaxation, meditation, physical exercise, and proper diet to help balance out all that intense mental energy that needs an outlet.

Venus in a fixed sign is stirring up their sexual repressions, child-abuse issues that were never resolved and need to surface and be channeled in a new way. In the world of sexually transmitted diseases, no one has to be more cautious than Venus in Taurus,Leo, Scorpio or Aquarius...followed by those who have their Mars in Taurus, Leo, Scorpio or Aquarius where the explosive sexual energies can become volatile. These people are experiencing hemorrhoidal flare-ups brought on by physical exhaustion from overdoing or recovering from accidents that never had a chance to heal.

Clean up excesses

Anyone with Jupiter in fixed signs need to clean up the excesses in their lifestyles, especially since it affects the liver/pancreas area; there is a need to cleanse the body through colon therapy (Rose Kamin: 373-5979) and purify the diet. Go to a spa, it will literally change your life.

Saturn in fixed signs, especially Taurus, will experience dramatic changes in your lives where old structures are released and transformed. New diets, exercise routines and going to health spas like The Oaks in Ojai (805-646-5573) where I had the privilege to lecture recently, and their sister spa, The Palms (619-325-1111) in Palm Springs, where I'm about to lecture. Both places are affordable for everyone as its owner, Sheila Cluff (whom I've met) is dedicated to educating and motivating people to enhance their lives through a commitment to wellness. She sure is a beauty!Inside and out.

Those with Neptune in fixed signs, especially Scorpio can expect inner/spiritual miracles (i.e. transformations) brought out by allergies, hypoglycemic tendencies and an increased responsiveness toward the environment.

The Pluto in Leo generation (those born from 1939 to 1957) are changing their appearances and releasing old habit patterns and replacing them with new ones. They are also having more surgeries that involve new medical breakthroughs, even transplants; more hysterectomies as changes in hormone levels and menstrual cycles increase. Surgery does not help one deal with emotional, mental or spiritual changes... but diet and exercise do. I am convinced we will see more people go on "health spa vacations" over the next eight years rather than head for cholesterol/adrenalin hell rushes. "Bon appetit!'

What's your story? Contributions, questions, and consultation appointments; call me at (408) 62 4-2881 or write me: P.O. Box 223825, Carmel, California 93922. See you next week.

"I traded a house full of rooms for a life full of friends"

The decision to move was a difficult one, but I was tired of cooking and cleaning and quite honestly ... being alone.

Valley Heights was a natural choice for me. As I started exploring my options and talking to people in the community, I discovered that I already knew several residents. They were very happy with the services and the quality of life at Valley Heights.

The owners, Richard Murphy and Kelly Chilcote, have operated Valley Convalescent Hospital for the last thirty years. As personal friends of mine I know the level of commitment they feel toward their residents.

I have discovered a whole new life. Free of the everyday chores, I am now using the extra time to attend exercise classes, book reviews and seminars. I have enjoyed making new friends and the challenge of living in an active and stimulating environment.

Yes, the decision was difficult but now the living is easy!

AQUARIUM REMODELING NEARLY COMPLETE

The first phase of a yearlong remodeling project at the Monterey Bay Aquarium is nearly complete, with the Group and Members' Entrance to reopen and an annex to the aquarium Gift & Bookstore to debut during Thanksgiving week.

By the end of 1992, two other projects will be finished: expanded classrooms for visiting school groups and new restrooms that—by popular demand—include changing tables for both moms and dads who visit with infants.

The Group and Members' Entrance and store annex both open on Nov. 23, in time for Thanksgiving weekend. The new classrooms will host their first students in March.

Still to be completed are major renovations of the sea otter exhibit, which reopens on April 3; expansion of the main Gift & Bookstore (closed from January 11 to mid-May); and improvements to the visitor information desk.

Construction crews are clearing the site for the aquarium's new exhibit wing, on Cannery Row adjacent to the main aquarium. The new wing, which opens early in 1996, will feature marine life of the open ocean and deep sea.

Remodeling and new construction will cost $62 million.

SEVENTH ANNUAL HOSPICE TREE OF LIFE CAMPAIGN KICKS OFF

Hospice of the Central Coast's seventh annual Tree of Life campaign is highlighted by the simultaneous lighting of two 25-foot trees in ceremonies in Salinas and Monterey on Dec. 8. Extending through Dec. 31, the Tree of Life campaign raises approximately $60,000 for Hospice and helps to provide in-home care for patients who have a life-threatening illness and support services for their fan families.

During the campaign, donors of $15 or more dedicate a light on the Hospice Tree of Life, one of which will be on the rooftop of the Monterey Marriott Hotel and the other atop the Bank of Salinas. "The lights, which will shine throughout the holiday season, are dedicated in honor or in memory of someone — a loved one or friend," said Susan Freeland, vice president of development for Hospice.

A card is sent to the person or family member being honored or remembered to announce the gift. Their names and that of the donor are entered in the Tree of Life Memory Books which are displayed in the lobbies of the Monterey Marriott Hotel and the Bank of Salinas throughout the holiday season. Choral performances in Monterey by the Santa Catalina Choir and in Salinas by the First Presbyterian Church Adult Chancel Choir are featured for the ceremonies, both of which begin at 5:30 p.m. The simultaneous lightings of the trees in the two cities is accomplished by using cellular phones.

"It's a wonderful event that draws the two communities together, even though they are separated by some 30 miles," said Freeland. Nearly 800 Monterey County patients and families were served in the Hospice program last year, said Freeland. Tree of Life donations help to provide care for those who do do have the resources to cover the cost of their care, and supports the Hospice Resource Centers and volunteer services in Salinas and Monterey.

For information on where or how to obtain an envelope to dedicate lights, call Hospice of the Central Coast at 372-6565 or 757-1505.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Sharing will put sunshine in your life

AFTER THE retreat from Moscow, six of Napoleon's soldiers arrived in a small French village bedraggled, cold and hungry.

The villagers saw they were without food. The soldiers found a huge kettle, put it in the village square, filled it with water, carefully placed six round stones in the pot, built a fire and began to stir. The villagers were curious and asked what they were doing.

"We are making stone soup. It's a gourmet delight, but a little cabbage might improve it."

A villager said, "I just remembered I have a small head of cabbage in my cellar." Each villager volunteered something else—a few carrots, celery, some potatoes, onions, parsley, bay leaves and finally one of the soldiers said, "I'm sure the mayor has forgotten he has a little meat, which is all we need to make the soup a work of art."

We all hoard, some a little, others a lot—and yet when we share our Potage de Pierre we have enough for all.

A hillbilly preacher tells us that "sharing can make a sunny place for a shady person."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Young women should consider careers in science, says Gertrude Belle Elion. "They don't appreciate how wide open the door really is," she says, compared to when she was starting out. "They can go to great lengths if they want to," as she did when the door wasn't so open 47 years ago. Elion was co-winner of the 1988 Nobel Prize for medicine for her pioneering work in developing drugs to fight leukemia, malaria, gout, herpes and auto-immune disorders. At age 73 she was researching anti-cancer and anti-viral drugs n her laboratory at Research Triangle Park in North Carolina.

To mark his 50th year on the job, William Mellor got to ride to work in a limousine, stepping out onto the red carpet while co-workers tossed confetti and led him to a reception where he was presented with gifts. Then it was work as usual in the men's department of a Wanamaker branch store in Philadelphia. When Mellor was hired as a $14-a-week stockboy, new employees known as "cadets" were sent to a summer retreat to lean the company creed.

Comments from critics:

As music scene changes

By LYN BRONSON

LIKE MEDIEVAL alchemists trying to turn base metal into gold, there are forces in our community who have been searching for ways to extend our community's musical assets and create music where there was none before.

Unlike the alchemists whose efforts were doomed to failure, we are seeing the beginning of something very exciting in the recently announced plans of the Monterey County Symphony (see photo of Conductor Clark Suttle directly above) to launch a series of four chamber concerts at the Mayflower Presbyterian Church at Fourteenth Street and Central Avenue in Pacific Grove.

Not profitable

As we all know, classical music is not a profitable enterprise and ticket sales rarely cover the costs of producing musical events. Thus most organizations rely heavily on private donations, support groups and to some extent public funding. Since most organizations sponsoring classical music events operate under deficits, expanding a musical season usually means expanding the deficit.

The miracle we are seeing in the creation of the Music at the Mayflower is that ways have been found to expand music in our community without expanding its deficit.

The Pacific Grove Arts Commission was instrumental in securing a commitment of public funds for the establishment of this series in Pacific Grove. The Arts Commission headed by its chairman, Bruce Singer and consisting of Cathy Findley, Kay Howard, Meg Manus, Bob McIntyre, Barbara Murphy, Laverne Seeman, Terrence and Barbara Zito, is committed to building a broader community base for cultural events and is particularly dedicated to enhancing the quality of these events.

With the cooperation of the Arts Commission and the Mayflower Church, the Monterey County Symphony devised a detailed survey to identify programmatic and logistical concerns of Pacific Grove residents and Symphony supporters.

The response, which was overwhelmingly favorable, helped the Symphony board of directors and its president, Sherrie McCullough, to make the important decision to proceed with this series of chamber concerts which represents a logical extension of the regular Monterey County Symphony season.

Founding members

In addition to the funding from the City of Pacific Grove, generous donations from Round Table Pizza and fifty founding members makes this series possible.

The choice of Pacific Grove for the series is a logical one since the community of Pacific Grove has played an important part in the Monterey County

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

THE CARMEL Bach Festival's new administration is now one year old and though it wasn't voted in by a public balloting, it has achieved a very high approval rating on its record so far.

Still, with new Music Director Bruno Weil in charge and feeling more assured (see photo above), one could safely expect the status quo to begin to be reshaped and to make room for some new ideas.

Because the previous Maestro prevailed for such an extended length of time, one tends to forget how many major alterations did take place in the course of 36 years. To the enormous basic Bach repertoire, we got the addition of opera (mostly Mozart either in concert version or fully staged), dance (mostly Baroque) and the expansion of the season to three full weeks.

No surprise

It is therefore not surprising that this process will continue and, certainly, well-thought-through innovations are a positive and vital factor in keeping a festival fresh and alive.

Maestro Weil's desire to explore new possibilities and refinements for his inheritance has resulted in some intriguing ideas and developments. What is most praiseworthy is the fact that certain treasured events are not being tampered with.

Wednesday night at the Mission, which is so important and memorable to so many faithful fans, will continue to work its particular and special magic. The Sunday afternoon culmination of the Festival, with its absorbing reverence provided by the Passions and the B Minor Mass, will continue to cast its transcending and singular spell.

Humor welcomed

Humor, a very welcome element, has really not been a total stranger at the Festival and it will be pleasant to have its musical manifestation continue. To the music lover it is always a special treat when done well.

Another happy ingredient for 1993 is the return of many performers who have become particular favorites of Festival audiences.

Janina Fialkowska will have the showcase evening concert recital that her talents warrant. Singers Maria Venuti, David Gordon and Daniel Lichti will also be major participants. Maestro Weil and the orchestra will continue to be the moving force and indispensable backbone underlying every endeavor.

And finally, adding another weekend to the schedule by opening on Saturday night optimizes the audience's opportunity to attend the concerts.

Will miss opera

But I will miss the opera production. In spite of the problems and the obviously

JAZZ BASSIST Red Mitchell suffered a fatal heart attack and stroke earlier this month. He was to have performed on Friday night, Nov. 20, at Hidden Valley Music Seminars of Carmel Valley. Instead, a memorial concert will be held then and there. See John Detro's Jazz Tides column on page 34.

ACTOR'S EQUITY player Kaycie Skyler appears in the new show at GroveMont Theater site near downtown Monterey. It's the local company's first Equity-connected project, and more of the same loom for the near and far future. See story page 35. (Stephen Moorer photo)

Monterey Opera production evidences fine sense of unity

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

THE CHORUS of Monterey Opera Association sang " Three cheers for Pagliacci" and if I could sing, I would happily join them in those words.

Saturday night in the Steinbeck Forum of Monterey Conference Center, the performance of Ruggiero Leoncavallo's Pagliacci was another high point in the company's development.

This is the composer's only truly successful work, one that brought him long-lasting world fame, and this is its centennial year. Composed in 1892, it is typical of its times. There is emotional intensity, almost lurid drama and rich musical content, although it is interesting to note how often this very Italianate work pays homage to Wagner in its harmonies and orchestral usage.

General Director and Production Coordinator Juliette Williams assembled a strong performing group to match the sure-fire dramatic flamboyance and appeal of the very powerful libretto, which happily was sung in mostly understandable English. It is said the young Leoncavallo had been in attendance when such an incident actually took place in Calabria.

But first, the singers. Baritone Michael Taylor was a compelling Prologue. He laid out the story that was to come, with much theatrical finesse and depth of tone.

Then, as the story unfolded, he appeared as a wonderfully effective Tonio, with a voice to match. He is the ugly clown whose rejection by Nedda made him become the malevolent catalyst of the tragedy that followed. He also and originally has the unforgettable last line of the opera, "The comedy is finished," which he delivered with great irony. Taylor is a polished and impressive professional performer.

Attention commanded

Canio, the wronged husband sung by tenor Peter Lewis, riveted one's attention with some of the best music ever written for the male voice.

Un tal gioco, Vesti la giubba and No Pagliaccio, non son are totally effective when sung with sensitivity and passion. Both vocally and dramatically, Peter Lewis was all one could wish for in the role. He sang with ringing tone, his projection was strong and true and his acting was almost mesmerizing.

As Nedda, the focus of the passions of three of the four male principals of the opera, soprano Nancy Williams was most convincing as a woman who doesn't understand the stormy emotions seething around her.

Her Ballatella was indeed a bird song, and her voice soared gracefully. It was also large and vibrant in the love scene and truly exciting in her conflicts with Canio, yet she could be light and charming as Columbine.

Delightful Harlequin

Baritone Daniel Morris, as Nedda's sweetheart, sang warmly in their duet.Tenor Joseph Meyers as Beppe was a most sympathetic character, as well as a delightful Harlequin with his very well sung Serenade.

The chorus of villagers? Fully committed participants, singing their music and acting with verve, while adding local color and activity to the proceedings.

There were some delightful additions to distinguish this production. Members of Ballet Fantasque provided a visual recounting of the story with ballerina Olga McVay charmingly interpreting Nedda's Bird Song and Milou Ivanovsky and Jerzy Kozlowski passionately depicted the unhappy lovers to the strains of their duet.

Professional clown Peter Dragula flitted through the opera to the audience's delight, displaying his finely-honed skills during the Prelude, the Intermezzo and part of the ballet sequence.

Excellent set

The set designed by Roger Thompson was excellent. Highly attractive and colorful, it worked as well as was possible in the limited area available. The costumes were colorful and appropriate.

Stage Director Benjamin Goldman wisely kept the stage action clear and appropriate for the plot, allowing the opera to be appreciated simply and naturally.

Music Director Stephen Tosh, who took over the reins of the production just a week ago, kept a firm hand on the proceedings, guiding and controlling the singers and the orchestra with great skill and understanding.

There was a fine sense of unity in the effort. Full musical values were provided and, while all was not perfect, the end result was a performance that was thoroughly enjoyable.

I look forward with anticipation to the Monterey Opera Association's next production, which will be Kurt Weill's Three Penny Opera on March 13 and 14, 1993.

Plotkin...

great effort involved, the results were almost invariably excellent and enjoyable. Innovation was the key and ingenuity was the keyhole it was fitted into. Until the day comes when there is an opera house on the peninsula, I'm willing to make the compromises that past festival productions demanded.

Remembering the past and how happily the Carmel Bach Festival grew and expanded in quality and in length, it would appear that this process will not be sidetracked by the plans that have been announced for the 1993 edition.

I wish for Maestro Weil and his associates that the Muse of Music continues to smile upon them.

Unique quintet due at Sunset

BASED IN Carmel, Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula will continue celebrating its 25th anniversary season with a concert by the unique quintet called An die Musik at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 19, at Sunset Center Theater.

Society spokesperson Ben Heller says tickets for the event will be available at the door — $14 general and $5 under 21.

The quintet consists of an oboe, string trio and piano. Its name comes from one of Schubert's most beloved songs, the title meaning "to music" or "praise to music."

Ensemble members — Andrew Dawes (violin), Richard Brice (viola), Matthias Naegle (cello), Gerard Reuter (oboe), Constance Emmerich (piano) — will play an aria written for them by Jerzy Sapieyevski.

Also on the program: Mozart's Quartet for Oboe, Violin, Viola and Cello in F Major, K. 370; Beethoven's Trio for Oboe, Violin and Viola; and Mozart's Quartet for Piano and Strings in E Flat Major, K. 493.

The New York group has been cited for the "sheer beauty of its playing," says Heller. It has been featured in concerts throughout this country, Western Canada, Europe.

The unit has recorded in five European nations, and their radio broadcasts have been enjoyed by millions.

The Washington Post evaluated a concert at Kennedy Center this way: "A brilliant, beautifully balanced performance. Even in a city as blessed as Washington is with fine chamber music, the first visit of this ensemble was a noteworthy event."

THE MUSICAL organization known as Chanticleer hails from San Francisco. Its leaders define it as "an orchestra of voices."

This week, Artistic Director Louis Botto and Music Director Joseph Jennings announced that Chanticleer will do two concerts of Christmas music at Carmel Mission.

The date: Wednesday, Dec. 23. The first performance will start at 5 p.m. and the second three hours later.

Chanticleer offers various programs, matching "the style of the music to the acoustics of each space (on the tour), enhancing the ambience and listening pleasure for our audiences."

AND LET'S not forget I Cantori di Carmel. Its 11th season will include 8 p.m. concerts on Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 12-13, at Carmel Mission Basilica.

Dr. Sal Farrantelli, music director of I Cantori, has chosen Mozart's Missa Brevis as the feature work for these occasions. The program also will include Pergolesi's Magnificat as well as excerpts from the Christmas Oratorio of Saint-Saens.

Tickets ($13) are available at Monterey County Theater Alliance, Do Re Mi Music, Bookworks, or from any member of I Cantori. Advance purchases are recommended.

Pianist captures hearts at Symphony event

By LYN BRONSON

ON SUNDAY, November 15, in Carmel's Sunset Center, the Monterey County Symphony, with Clark Suttle conducting, joined forces with eminent Russian pianist Tatiana Nikolayeva in the Rachmaninoff Second Piano Concerto.

After hearing her performance, it was clear that an unusual pianist was in our midst. The most remarkable aspect of her performance was its interpretive freedom.

We sometimes hear critics lament the passing of the great romantic pianists, and complain that most of the younger generation all sound alike. And there is some truth to the claim that if you listen to most of the 40-odd extant recordings of the Rachmaninoff Second Concerto you will have a difficult time distinguishing between them because so many of them sound alike.

Not so in her case

Not so with Nikolayeva. This tiny woman plays like a giant and leaves her imprint on every phrase.

Here, indeed, is playing in the grand manner. Can anyone bring a fresh approach to the familiar material? The answer is a resounding yes.

Her performance was original from beginning to end and sounded like no other I had ever heard. Nikolayeva went for the grand gesture, the big sound and fleet tempos which carried the listener from beginning to end with total absorption. Speaking of the beginning, Nikolayeva kept her pedal pressed to the floor as she played the eight opening chords, each one a different harmony, but each one louder than the one preceding and building up to an extraordinary sonority which could have filled the Hollywood Bowl. This was a larger-than-life performance, where the piano was king.

Mannerism

Her performance was, however, not without mannerism.

In this concerto there are some luscious long melodies for the piano, usually marked by Rachmaninoff, to be begun softly and gradually worked up to a climax.

Nikolayeva was fond of reversing these dynamics by beginning the melodies forte and gradually introducing exquisite diminuendos and finally achieving lovely, soft pianissimos. And the interesting thing is that it actually worked.

Only a purist would insist that the dynamics and tempos be exactly as specified in Rachmaninoff's score. And the truth of the matter is that Rachmaninoff's own recording reflects changes in dynamics and tempos from the printed score, which is not surprising since it has been estimated that Rachmaninoff had probably performed this concerto over 600 times between its composition in 1901 and the recording made in 1929 with Stokowski. Thus even Rachmaninoff was searching for ways to keep the work from becoming stale.

Unmerciful quality

Unfortunately, at times Nikolayeva tended to bang unmercifully, not only against the full orchestra where it is justified, but often when she was an equal partner or accompanying an orchestral solo, as she did in the statement of the first theme of the first and second movements where all we could hear was the piano.

But the Rachmaninoff Second Concerto is equal to any punishment and the performance of Nikolayeva was still a rousing success.

It is even a most fitting performance for the 1990s where our daily staple on TV is gratuitous violence, car chases and vicious shootings.

If her performance represents the Arnold Schwarzenegger "Terminator Two" school of Rachmaninoff playing rather than the suave John Gielgud school, then we simply have to recognize that there is more than one way to perform this concerto.

As proof of this, Nikolayeva received a warm and spontaneous standing ovation from the enthusiastic audience.

And....

In addition to the Rachmaninoff Concerto, Suttle and the orchestra played a mellow rendition of Stravinsky's Firebird Suite and an exciting one of Tchaikowsky's rarely heard Symphony No. 3.

In both, Suttle paid loving attention to all the small details that condition the total effect and that are sometimes absent. Balances were minutely ordered, impetus never disappeared and many other subtleties were precisely in place.

Everything was purposeful, and more important, the works sprang to life in full human dimension, warm and utterly appealing.

Bronson...

Symphony's history.

At one time, the Pacific Grove Middle School Auditorium was a regular performance site for the orchestra, but as audiences grew the site was outgrown and the concerts were moved outside of Pacific Grove.

The selection of the Mayflower Church is a particularly happy one since the Church recently celebrated its centennial by presenting a chamber concert led by Clark Suttle and performed by string players of the Monterey County Symphony. The Mayflower Church's acoustics are particularly clear and engaging.

Built in 1911, the Church seats 250, is cube-shaped with exposed wooden beams, brass organ pipes, leaded-glass windows, and oak paneling.

Initial offering

The first concert, Brass Choirs and Candlelight, will take place on Saturday, December 19 at 7:30 p.m. and will feature music for brass choir, percussion and chorus performed in candlelight organized by principal trumpet Adam Gordon and conducted by Clark Suttle.

Tickets for the series are $50 for adults and $25 for children.

Single ticket prices are $15 for adults and $8 for children.

All of the concerts will be delivered in an informal "talk to the audience" format and the audience will be treated to a free post-concert reception to meet the performers.

We all come out winners on this series. The Monterey County Symphony extends further into the field of chamber concerts, the City of Pacific Grove adds a new jewel to its cultural crown, distinguished performers of the Symphony have a new showcase for their talents, and most of all there's a rich new series of concerts for our community.

Jazz Tides

Remembering Red

AS JON Hendricks said of the departed Roland Kirk: "Everybody knows we don't die; we just go somewhere else."

It's not impossible that Red will be there in spirit when the fine jazz pianist Roger Kellaway plays a two-set concert at Hidden Valley Music Seminars on Friday night, Nov. 20. Roger and master bassist Red Mitchell had been booked as a duo, but Red suffered a fatal heart attack and stroke up in Oregon on Nov. 8.

The two old friends recorded, went on the road and laughed a lot together. Kellaway agreed to the solo appearance as a gesture of affection for the other man.

Hidden Valley exec Peter Meckel invited local musicians to go on by and participate in a closing memorial jam. "Anyone who shows up to play for Red won't, of course, be charged admission."

Tickets will be available when the box office opens a half hour before the 8 p.m. start time. Non-alcoholic beverages and snacks will be available; those who enjoy wine may bring their own.

Not incidentally, Johnny Adams of KRML Jazz Radio will do a one-hour special on Mitchell at 5 p.m. Friday, Nov. 20.

Red played with the likes of Dizzy Gillespie, Billie Holiday, Hampton Hawes. He moved to Sweden after the murder of John F. Kennedy — "I found less racism," he said, "and less nationalism, sexism, ageism."

Mitchell was the quartet leader when drummer Billy Higgins made his recording debut on Les Koenig's original Contemporary label (Los Angeles). That session also featured significant work by the late pianist Lorraine Geller and reclusive tenorman James Clay.

During past shows at Hidden Valley, Red played solo bass and piano, told stories, sang songs from his own pen. Wife Diane, an extremely pleasant photographer and maker of films, always was at a front table.

AN EXCELLENT band will be spotlighted Thursday evening, Nov. 19, in producer Richard Armbrust's series of public dances at Mission Ranch Barn. It's the unit fronted by Los Angeles trumpeter Jay Daversa and local pianist Bob Phillips (with Terry Miller on electric bass and drummer Pat Tragenza).

Doors open at 6:30 with the music starting half an hour later. Tickets cost $8 or $15 per couple. Full bar and appetizers will be available — and the refurbished Barn has a no-smoking policy indoors.

JAZZMAN NICK Williams hosts another of his sessions at the Lumber Room in Carmel's Vista Lobos Park. That'll be on Thursday, Nov. 19, beginning at 7 p.m. Contributions are optional and simply cover the refreshments.

Co-produced by Carmel Recreation Department, these gatherings draw such players as Dennis Murphy, Bob Blankenship, Marty Bartoli, Bucky Boynes, Dasher (David Kempton), Buddy Jones, on and on. They're easy-going fun.

THE JAZZ Arts Service Awards (first annual) will be presented by California Jazz Now magazine and the Jazz Arts Music Network on Saturday night, Nov. 21. Place: Calvin Simmons Room of Oakland's Parc Hotel. These will cite support pros (bookers, schools, clubs, so on) as well as musicians — all nominated by the publication's statewide readership.

Nominees for the main Bessie Award (named after Bessie Smith) include honcho Tim Jackson of Monterey Jazz Festival and Kuumbwa Center in Santa Cruz. MJF founder Jimmy Lyons was nominated in the category honoring "those who stayed and fought" in California rather than chasing fame to New York.

Ticket info: (510) 531-2839 or (408) 985-8890.

THE JAZZ and French cookery continue at Mermaid Bistro on Cannery Row. "I do not know what will happen," said co-owner Corrine Garoscio. "I cannot talk at length because I do not know. And there is so much to take care of. I sleep four hours a night."

The other owners — her husband Jean-Michel, 31, and Erwan Anger, 28 — were jailed on charges of having embezzled about $8 million from a firm that employed them back in Lyon. Bail was denied during their Nov. 12 appearance at U.S. Magistrate's Court (San Jose).

The FBI conducted a weeks-long investigation before the arrests were made. France has another month or so in which to file extradition papers.

GroveMont signs Actor's Equity pact

By JOHN DETRO

WHEN THE GroveMont Theater opens a Rupert Holmes comedy thriller this week, a milestone will be reached.

The presentation of Accomplice at Monterey Playhouse (425 Washington St.) marks the local company's first association with Actor's Equity.

The curtain will rise at 8 p.m. Saturday night, Nov. 21, under an Equity-approved Special Projects Contract. Equity actress Kaycie Skyler's in the cast with GroveMont regulars John Rousseau, Jeffrey Heyer, Jeanne Wooster Atkinson.

There will be two Special Discount Previews on Thursday and Friday evenings, Nov. 19-20. All tickets then will be priced at $6.

"We have been paying actors for quite a while now," says GroveMont founder Stephen Moorer, "so we knew we'd cross this bridge eventually. I'm very happy with the agreement we have reached and fully anticipate using Equity people in the future."

Clever mix

Playwright Holmes has crafted a clever melding of theatrical techniques — from Agatha Christie and Brecht to Ira Levin and Sartre. This item's billed as "part murder mystery, part sex farce." GroveMont pledges: "Guess how it ends and we'll refund your money."

The Saturday night event includes drinks, appetizers and "a buffet after the show with the cast." Gala tickets go for $20 per.

Accomplice will run Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 7 p.m. through Dec. 19. Prices: $12 general and $10 for students, seniors, military. Half-price will be the rule on Sunday, Nov. 22.

"This one is for mature audiences," GroveMont warns. "No children under 12 will be admitted."

This season marks the beginning of assigned seating at Monterey Playhouse; reservations are suggested. Call 649-6852 for more information.

Skyler has extensive stage credits that include work in New York and Los Angeles. She was in the original cast of the Tony-nominated rock opera Starmites.

She has appeared in The Edge of Night and The Guiding Light along with the recent feature film Out on a Limb. Major roles: Rossignol in Marat Sade and title parts for Evita and Hello Dolly.

Moorer directs the much-experienced cast.

CARMEL'S SUNSET Center will host the 22nd annual Homecrafter's Marketplace from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21.

Speaking for the occasion, Joan Vandervort says the Christmas gift fair will draw "more than 300 local artists and craftspeople."

The show will offer Christmas ornaments, dolls, wooden reindeer, homemade soaps, wearable art, jewelry, wreaths, dried flower art, photography, paintings, quilts, ceramics, birdhouses, on and on.

"Lunch will be available," she adds, "with desserts to eat there or have packaged as gifts. Admission's free."

In case of rain, the festive gathering will regroup on Sunday, Nov. 22.

Pacific Grove action

THE NEXT opening at Pacific Grove Art Center will come on Friday, Nov. 27, it was announced this week, with new shows then remaining through Jan. 2, 1993.

A kick-off reception was scheduled for 7-9 p.m. that date. The artists:

• Gill Gallery. Anita Benson's acrylics on paper.

• Dyke Gallery. Oil and acrylic paintings by Thomas Brooks.

• Boyer Gallery. Connie Pearlstein with Susan Bradshaw. Knitting, spinning and Florentine work by the former. Bradshaw will exhibit three handwoven blankets.

Highlands

SCULPTURE HOUSE and Gardens in Carmel Highlands will open a one-woman show of new pieces by Gay Gordon on Sunday, Nov. 22.

Information about the reception may be had by calling 624-2476.

"Traditionally," say Ellen and Leo Beinhorn of Sculpture House, "bronze sculpture was brown, green or black, but with the advent of Gordon came patination ranging from cool stonelike grays to rich eggplant colors which enhance the dramatic impact of the sculptures. Gordon's new works (evidence) an even larger range of finishes, textures and themes."

The exhibit will run through Dec. 31.

Guild invitation

CARMEL CRAFTS Guild will present a free public slide show at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 25, in the Monterey Senior Center.

The show's subject: the legendary Mama Gravander, San Francisco weaver and teacher. An oral history of her years, collected by American River College in Sacramento, will accompany the slides.

Additionally, Guild members will share their memories of the San Francisco weaving scene.
